Editorial

I would like to introduce myself for those who do not know me. My name is Glenda Pryor and Dundurn is my home town. The Dundurn Newsletter committee hired me to give you a fresh perspective for the town's newsletter.

As you can see there is a different layout with stories, pictures, and an added "Go Ask Bob" column, which mimics an Anne Landers advice column. Just for fun! We welcome you to make submissions for this column while remaining anonymous, so please contribute.

Other changes that will take place in the near future, will be the advertising. We will give you a sneak preview of the format, but for now we will continue with the business card ads. I hope you enjoy your read, and please email us with any story suggestions.

Thank you and enjoy your read!

Splash, Spin, & Dash

The Dundurn Digger's Annual Try-All-Athon is set for Friday, June 16 at 17 Wing - Detachment Dundurn.

The kids are getting excited and once again the committee has worked hard to make this event happen as this will be the Ninth Annual Triathlon for the school. The event involves biking, swimming, and running for Grade 1 to 6 students.

Principle Cheryl Shields anticipates lots of spectators and reminds parents to please provide the school with their vehicle license plate number before hand, as there is security at the front gate and this will provide smooth access for those who would like to watch the event.

Lunch tickets can be purchased in advance for $5.00, as the Det Kitchen will be serving hotdogs, hamburgers, juice, and chips.

The transition area opens at 9 am and at 9:30 the race begins at the pool.

Other events to make note of for Dundurn School are:

June 21 - Grade 6 Orientation to Hanley

June 22 - Kindergarten Farewell

June 22 - Volunteer Appreciation

June 23 - Grade 6 Farewell

Go Ask Bob

Advice Column

Dear Bob:

While eating a quick lunch in a fast food restaurant, a couple in their early 30's arrived with two infants. The mother immediately wiped the tabletop with a baby wipe then placed a changing pad on the table. She went to get food and instructed the Dad to change the babies diapers on top of the dining table.

He did, mumbling "sorry" to me. I basically fled the scene. Bob! This baby's bottom was literally inches away from my meal.

I don't have kids, but is this using good manners? The restaurant has a "family" bathroom, complete with a changing table.

Am I out of the loop? In addition to this being obviously unsanitary, it seems like a violation of the baby's privacy.

Dear Buttwives:

You are correct on all fronts. He did mumble sorry which would indicate that he knew at that point it was bad manners. It's too bad he didn't grow a pair and tell his partner he would change the baby in the restroom. It certainly is unsanitary, un-necessary, disgusting and yes, a violation of privacy.

Dear Bob:

My husband comes from a very large family of 9 brothers & sisters. Each of his siblings have 3 to 4 kids each. Every year my husband's family celebrates his mother's birthday at a large family gathering at her home. Like us, most come from out of town, so we stay over the weekend. There are many, many kids and babies at the house, along with constant cooking and cleaning.

My husband and I do not have children by choice and I live a simple, no fuss life as I don't like cooking and cleaning. Bob, I am exhausted after these two days and really resent having to help cook and clean up after a gazillion people. I don't want to go anymore but my husband is disappointed in me.

I think he is making a big deal out of nothing as it's not even my mother, plus I don't even spend any quality time with her because all I'm doing with the other ladies is cooking & cleaning up after kids. Do you think my husband will get over it or should I continue to go?

- Hates Doing Dishes

Dear Hates Doing Dishes

So you are saying you would rather cause a rift with your husband and probably his family too because for 2 days out of 365 days in the year, you are inconvenienced by chores? Well too bad, so sad, and no, your husband will not get over it. You should be grateful that you are even invited and welcomed as part of the family.

MP Report - Tom Lukiwski

There is a scandalous story in the news about foreign interests trying to influence the outcome of a legitimate election in a Western democratic country. But it isn't the story you probably think it is.

It is generally assumed that the 2015 Canadian federal election was part of the natural course of political events – that Canadians had become dissatisfied with the Conservative government and were spontaneously drawn to the charms of Justin Trudeau's campaign. As it turns out, this was not entirely true.

According to a 32-page complaint submitted to Elections Canada, there is evidence that the outcome of the federal election was, to some degree, bought and paid for by deep-pocketed American lobby groups. The Tides Foundation, an anti-oil environmentalist group, carried out an extensive campaign to bring down the Conservative government.

The Tides Foundation set up a network of third-party groups that operated much like American political action committees (PACs). Canadian electoral law strictly limits how much third-party groups can spend during elections but the Tides Foundation is alleged to have circumvented these limits by helping to create dozens of inter-connected third-party groups.

These groups spent over $6 million in the 2015 campaign, much of which came from US sources and $1.5 million of which was donated directly by the Tides Foundation itself.

A prominent third-party group in this spider's web was an organization called Leadnow. This organization and its affiliates are alleged to have worked on two fronts. First, it ran a national campaign aimed at encouraging strategic voting. Second, it operated a grassroots campaign, flying out political advisers and campaign workers to targeted ridings throughout the country.

Leadnow's activities were so alarming that even the NDP complained of them, since many of their activities were aimed at draining away NDP vote in favour of the Liberals. And Leadnow was so brazen about their activities that they actually bragged about them afterwards to their American sponsors.

Step back for a minute and put the word "Russian" in place of "American" and you can easily see what an outrage this is. It represents the most serious threat to electoral sovereignty in Canadian history.

While this scandal has not gained much public attention, Yves Cote, the commissioner of Elections Canada has launched an official investigation. Former Elections Canada commissioner Jean-Pierre Kingsley has lent his support, describing the influence of foreign money in the 2015 election as "unacceptable."

As citizens, we also all have a duty to stand up for our democracy. If they have integrity, the Liberal government must be prepared to bite the hand that feeds them. I would like to encourage all Saskatchewan residents to call and write Minister Ralph Goodale and demand that the Liberal government introduce legislation to curtail the influence of foreign money on Canadian elections.
